

The Last Flight

Mothers, especially young ones in societies with diseased social contacts among relatives, continue to face unbearable discrimination in the family. Physical violence from men and poverty are the most common causes of maternal suicide.

The society must stop pretending that the problem does not exist labeling such mothers as "monsters who kill own children." The journalist must expose the real monsters that bring women to suicide. Until this happens women around the world will continue to jump out of windows with their children, and we will read about events like those that I list here.

Notes

I present here mostly Russian cases, as the study was carried out in a Russian-speaking segment of the Internet. I included several cases of suicides of pregnant women to expose that problem as well. However it is a big a topic in itself that cannot be reduced to biological reasons. I cannot assert that all listed cases took place in reality. A lot of news in Russia are rigged. I have not considered suicides of mothers with adult children due to poverty and cases that looked like a physical murder of mother and child by a man .
